PREFACE

As the New York State Academy for Teaching and Learning (NYSATL) continues to seek ways of offering teachers meaningful, standards-based professional development opportunities, we recognize the need for coordination across all PreK-Adult, State and federally funded programs. The statewide professional development networks included in this publication play a key role in building the capacity of classroom teachers by increasing their opportunities to participate in professional development activities supporting NYSATL. The following pages provide the mission of each network and a listing of regional contacts. Since regional contacts change periodically, NYSATL commits to updating these lists and making them available on its website at www.nysatl.nysed.gov

Through the Regional School Support Centers, these networks are coordinating efforts and leveraging resources so they can offer on-going peer review opportunities to teachers at the regional level. NYSATL values its partnership with these entities and will continue to support their efforts on behalf of the teachers of New York State.

NYSATL MISSION

The mission of the New York State Academy for Teaching and Learning is to improve the achievement of all students by enhancing teachers' abilities to provide quality instruction based on New York State learning standards.

The Academy believes that on-going teacher-to-teacher interaction focusing on the improvement of learning experiences within the context of the Statewide Peer Review process is an effective professional development tool for teachers.

The Academy promotes the use of the Statewide Peer Review process as a means of achieving quality standards-based instruction and high levels of student achievement.

TEACHER CENTERS

Mission Statement

Teacher Resource and Computer Training Centers were established by the New York State Legislature in 1984 to provide systematic, ongoing professional education services to the State's teachers. Teacher Centers are unique in their approach to providing professional development, since they are governed by a policy board that is, by law, composed of at least 51% teachers. Each Center provides services to its constituents based on locally determined needs.

Teacher Centers have developed successful, cost effective, programs that address the purposes prescribed in statute. Their goals encompass the following areas:

- Assist educators in assessing and meeting the learning needs of students
- Provide computer demonstration and training sites and programs for educators
- Promote educators' use of and involvement in educational research to develop and produce curricula and curricular material
- Provide educators with training for the improvement of teaching skills
- Provide a location and atmosphere to foster sharing and increased understanding of resources, ideas, methods, approaches, information and materials among educators
- Train educators to prepare students to use high technology and to teach the critical thinking and related skills needed for the changing world community.

Centers provide a structure for teachers to take charge of their own professional growth, and afford them an opportunity to share with one another the great wealth of expertise that they possess. Approaches to delivering professional development include new teacher training and support, mentoring, peer coaching, collegial circles, mini-grants, and research opportunities, as well as a full complement of topics offered in more traditional workshop or course formats.

Over the years, Teacher Centers have expanded both the scope and depth of services offered, and have become educational service centers. The entire educational community is encouraged to participate in Center activities, and in many cases special programs are offered for parents and other community groups. Teacher Centers build collaboration across the public and private sectors, including institutions of Higher Education and business and industry; leverage State funds to increase resources available to local districts; offer affordable training in technology and innovative teaching practices; and maintain high standards of accountability in the services they provide. They represent a unique infrastructure that continues to contribute to the improvement of education in New York State.
